Introduction

In this chapter we provide an overview of the economic environment in Suriname.

1.1 Economic environment in Suriname

Although in Latin America and the Caribbean, “the growth rates of GDP per capita tend to accelerate while inflation records were significantly reduced compared to the previous years”, this is not particularly the case in Suriname¹. Inflation in Suriname in 2019 – June 2024 is still high². As we can see in the chart below, for the past four years, the inflation level in Suriname has not been favorable, which has an impact on investments³.

Additionally, the GDP growth rate in recent years has not been sufficient to compensate for the sharp contraction in 2020 and 2021⁴. The 2023 GDP (3.54 billion USD) is still well below the pre-pandemic level of 2019 (3.98 billion USD)⁵. Minor, single-digit growth is not sufficient for a speedy full recovery.

The General Bureau of Statistics publishes data on the export value per sector, per year⁶. These data show how significant the mining sector (e.g. oil & gold) is for Surinamese exports. Value wise, it dominates all other export sectors combined (see figure 2). The country's highly concentrated exports reflect its high dependency on non-renewable natural resources⁷. The Ministry of Finance & Planning also acknowledges this. In their annual financial plan 2024, they have stated the following: "Mining exports, which also include gold, account on average for about 81 percent of export value in the 2018-2022 period. Agricultural export value in the 2015-2021 period accounts for an average of about 3 percent of total export value. Wood and wood products exports make up about 4 percent of total export value on average. For fish and shrimp, the average share of total export value is about 2 percent. These figures indicate the one-sided structure of the export base"⁸.

On October 1st, 2024, the Final Investment Decision (FID) for the first offshore oil project in Suriname (the GranMorgu project) was announced by TotalEnergies and its partner APA Corporation. GranMorgu is located in Block 58, which is 150 km off the coast of Suriname. It is estimated that this project alone holds more than 750 million barrels of recoverable reserves. The project includes a Floating Production Storage and Offloading (FPSO) unit that is capable of producing 220,000 barrels of oil per day. The total investment sum for this project is estimated at around $10.5 billion (the "largest investment" in Suriname to date) and first oil is expected in 2028⁹. In light of this announcement, it is not expected that the high dependency on non-renewable natural resources will shift anytime soon.

Investments by the private sector in Suriname have, not surprisingly, been declining in recent years¹⁰ (see figure 3).

According to UNCTAD (United Nations Conference on Trade and Development)¹¹, net Foreign Direct Investment inflow in Suriname was minus 64.8 million USD in 2023. In the past decades there have been several years in which FDI inflows was negative.

Most of the investment that are made are focused on the oil sector, and the Terms of Reference of this study rightly state that “there is significant room for growth - and sector diversification - when compared to similar countries, regionally and globally”¹². Additionally, the World Bank says:

“Despite (Suriname) being an open economy, trade and regional integration are very limited...The lack of economic integration is reflected in low levels of inward foreign direct investment (FDI). Inward FDI flows are very volatile and have been negative for much of the past decade...Sectoral investment data is lacking, but anecdotal evidence suggests that this foreign investment is dominated by the extractive industries, with disinvestment or investment in new mines accounting for the volatile annual flows”¹³. Although there are few explicit restrictions to FDI, the World Bank does list several barriers to FDI: “Many legal and administrative barriers exist, such as the need for special industry licenses and lack of an arbitration tribunal. There is also a general lack of transparency and room for discretion in the negotiation of specific investment projects...The investment law allows fiscal incentives to be granted on an investor-by-investor basis without rules for automatic eligibility. As a result, investment benefits for overseas investors can vary according to the sector and the company’s negotiating strength. Domestic companies are critical of favorable arrangements negotiated with outside investors that provide competitive advantages relative to existing companies. Given the lack of established criteria for investment benefits, many agreements regarding concessions for large FDI projects have had to be approved by the National Assembly, creating room for political influence in the negotiation of commercial agreements. Although land in Suriname is abundant, there are obstacles regarding its availability and access”¹⁴.

It is of imminent importance to further investigate the causes of these unfavorable figures. Some answers can be found in the World Bank’s Ease of Doing Business index, or as prof. dr. Anthony Caram says we should probably say the “unease of doing business” when referring to Suriname¹⁵. Suriname occupies the 162nd place among 190 economies, but not every category scores equally poorly. For example, in the category Trading across Borders (Suriname’s best scoring category), the country’s rank is 87. The weakest areas of Suriname are Starting a Business, Getting Credit and Enforcing Contracts (with a ranking of 182, 181 and 188 respectively). The Terms of Reference rightly state that “Research studies and global benchmarking demonstrate that FDI attraction into a country requires political stability paired with high institutional quality of the government entities involved. Strong legal protections and a clear regulatory framework play a key role, in addition to other factors such as communications infrastructures, business networks, tax incentives and other criteria that foster ease of doing business”¹⁶. Suriname still has a long way to go in making the country more attractive to foreign investors and stimulating export (especially of non-traditional commodities)¹⁷.

The government of Suriname is aware of the fact that it should prioritize exports and investments (including FDI), and that it should address constraints to encourage and facilitate both exports and investments. This is apparent throughout all main policy documents (see figure 5).

1.2 Nationwide surveys conducted on the economic sector in Suriname

Over the past years, several business-related surveys have been conducted in Suriname. Here is a brief overview.

1.2.1 Productivity, Technology and Innovation in the Caribbean (2014) and Latin American Country Enterprise Survey (2010)¹⁸

This survey was conducted in 13 countries in the Caribbean and the purpose was, among other things, to make an assessment of factors that constrain firm growth. In Suriname, 152 firms were surveyed (75 in the manufacturing sector and 77 in the services sector). Topics included: 1) infrastructure and services, 2) sales, supplies, foreign trade and competition, 3) innovation, 4) legal environment/conflict resolution, 5) crime and prevention, 6), business-government relations, 7) labor and skills, 8) financing, 9) performance, 10) business environment and 11) business strategy and support programs. According to this survey, the most serious obstacles for Suriname were the categories ‘macroeconomic’ and ‘cost finance’.

1.2.2 Business enterprise survey (2016)¹⁹

The last business enterprise survey was conducted in 2016 by the General Bureau of Statistics. The purpose of this survey was to gain insight into the business ecosystem of Suriname, by mapping the number, type, size and location of businesses. A total of 12,475 businesses were registered (excluding the agricultural sector). While a World Bank study concluded that “The private sector in Suriname is dominated by small family firms engaged in non-tradable services such as construction, retail, trade, transportation, and hospitality” and stated that “There are around 200 large private companies with more than 100 employees”²⁰, the business survey only found 81 companies with more than 100 employees in Suriname. Figure 8 is an example of data collected in this survey. It clearly shows that most businesses are concentrated in the urban areas (Paramaribo/Wanica).

1.2.3 Enterprise survey (2018)²¹

The purpose of this survey was to contribute to the “strategic goal of building a climate for investment, job creation, and sustainable growth”. This survey is regularly conducted in a large number of countries, and it collects extensive amounts of information related to the internal and external functioning of businesses. However, this survey leaves out sectors like Agriculture, Fishing and Mining, which are important sectors in Suriname. The sectors that were focused on were manufacturing, construction, motor vehicle sales and repair, wholesale, retail, hotels and restaurants, storage, transportation and communication and IT. In Suriname 233 firms were surveyed. Topics included: 1) infrastructure and services, 2) sales and supplies, 3) management practices, 4) degree of competition, 5) innovation, 6) capacity, 7) time use of top manager, 8) land and permits, 9) crime, 10) finance, 11) business-government relations, 12) labor, 13) business environment and 14) performance. The largest constraints facing businesses in Suriname identified by this survey were access to finance, political instability and an inadequately educated workforce. A relevant finding: only 9% of the firms interviewed in the enterprise survey were directly or indirectly exporting their products (this was much lower than other countries in Latin America & the Caribbean).

1.2.4 Sector Study: Construction, ICT & Tourism sectors in Suriname (2018)²²

The purpose of this study was to gain extensive insight into the risks, opportunities and future prospects for the three mentioned sectors. According to the study, all three of these sectors were set to grow between 3 and 6% annually. Additionally, all sectors were dealing with an inadequately educated workforce (low educated workforce). For this sector study census data (a 10% sample) was analyzed, as well as survey data from the International Social Survey Programme (ISSP), which is a national survey conducted every two years in Suriname, also a small survey was included among 45 businesses focusing on employment, demand for staff, recruitment, compensation, trends and skill training and competencies. The findings of this sector study shows that there are major challenges within the labor market. Companies face challenges in finding workers with the necessary educational level/vocational training, work experience and work ethic (soft skills). There needs to be a better alignment between educational institutions and the labor market (especially the private sector) in Suriname.

1.2.5 Enabling Environment for Sustainable Enterprises in Suriname (2019)²³

The purpose of this assessment was to make an inventory of all external factors that affect productivity. A total of 218 business owners/managers and 30 employees of different types of businesses were surveyed. The focus was on multiple elements, including economic, social and political aspects. Topics included: legal and regulatory environment, trade and sustainable economic integration, fair competition, ICT, education, training, social protection and human rights and ILO standards. The response rate for the survey was just 20%. The research has shown that one of the main obstacles in doing business in Suriname is bribery with regard to regulations and inefficient customs procedures. An important social element had to do with the deficient quality of higher and vocational training in Suriname and the difficulty in hiring adequate personnel. Political elements include the fact that the government fails to provide the necessary conditions that are needed for effective social dialogue, especially when introducing new policies.

1.2.6 The Consequences of COVID-19 on Livelihoods in Suriname (2021)²⁴

Although this was not a business survey, since the focus was on employees (1016 respondents), the study includes a section named “Impact on livelihoods: Businesses”, that shows, for example, what types of business were affected and to what extent. The study illustrates that household incomes were affected through employment losses and business closures. Regarding the business aspect, the study showed amongst others, that the pandemic had a more severe impact on small businesses than on larger businesses. The small businesses had to adjust their operation hours and were also confronted with closures: temporary or permanent. The larger businesses were less affected by the pandemic, but they had to reduce the business hours and were also confronted with challenges as how to meet their financial obligations, e.g. paying loans.

Technical approach and methodology

In this chapter we provide an overview of the technical approach and methodology for implementing the surveys and focus groups. Each step will be explained in a certain level of detail.

2.1 Step 1: Pre-data collection phase

Deliverables: Directory of exporters and foreign investors, questionnaire, topic guide, survey implementation

The pre-data collection phase consists of planning the surveys and focus groups. This phase has multiple components: directory of exporters and foreign investors, questionnaire & topic guide development and testing, sampling plan, fieldwork- and training plan and data management strategy.

A comprehensive list of existing exporters and investors was developed (see appendix 3). Foreign investors are residents or companies from one country (the source country) that invest or acquire an interest in an enterprise operating in another economy (country) for the long-term²⁵. The investor's purpose is to have an effective voice in the management of the enterprise and to control the production, distribution and other activities of a firm in another country (the host country)²⁶. Exporters are companies that produce goods in one country and sell them in another country or provide a service in one country for a national or resident of another country²⁷. We also include multinational enterprises in our definition of exporters. Multinational enterprises are companies that operate in more than one country, they are firms which are primarily national, and their international operations are seen as expansions from their home/national base²⁸. In our case we have included Surinamese companies that operate outside of Suriname. Exporters also include companies that serve tourists in Suriname.

The Terms of Reference state that the list should include at least 500 companies (a list of major exporters and foreign investors in Suriname). As mentioned in chapter 1, the enterprise survey of 2018 found that only 9% of all companies in Suriname that were included in that survey were exporting (much lower than other countries in Latin America & the Caribbean). This indicates that very few companies in Suriname are exporting at the moment. Therefore, a large number of sources had to be investigated. This was necessary because for a market as small as Suriname's, it can be challenging to develop a directory that is sufficiently large (500 exporters and investors). That's why we made every effort and used every source that we could find. We also visited the SEOGS (Suriname Energy Oil and Gas Summit and Exhibition 2024) and the SAMAP Farmer's Fest for the purpose of identifying (future and current) exporters and foreign investors. At these two exhibitions, our team visited every stand to inquire about the exporter status of the company. Current exporters/investors were listed, as well as those with concrete plans to become an exporter/investor in the near future (1-2 years from now) and those who have stated that they are in contact with exporters.

Pictures 1-2. NIKOS team during the SEOGS expo in June 2024, in total 86 companies were listed for the directory and during SAMAP Farmer Fest in June 2024 in total 8 companies were listed.

Snowball-sampling (network approach)

For the focus groups (qualitative research), a topic guide has been developed partly based on the results from the 1st survey (see appendix 2). Especially in Suriname, focus groups are an important addition to surveys²⁹. With this qualitative approach we will gain more in-depth insights into the perceptions and opinions of important key stakeholders (exporters and foreign investors) regarding a broad range of topics. Qualitative research is mainly focused on the why question (open question). We will use an exploratory sequential mixed methods approach. This combines qualitative and quantitative data collection and analysis in a sequence of phases. By conducting focus groups, we gain a better understanding of the findings from the survey.

For the 1st and 2nd survey, a questionnaire (both in English and Dutch, see appendix 1) has been developed (for the 2nd survey a shortened version will be used) and presented to all the businesses in the directory, to obtain a representative picture of the constraints and needs of both exporters and foreign investors. The questionnaire is based on literature about businesses in general and barometer surveys in particular. It is also inspired by existing questionnaires that were used for business and business confidence surveys (in Suriname and abroad³⁰). Important input was also gained from the experts from NIKOS as well as consultations with SITA and other relevant stakeholders.

Fieldworkers (all with past experience in conducting surveys) were recruited and trained. Training for the fieldwork was 1 full-day and included everyone involved in the data collection phase. The research expert provided the training. The training included interviewing techniques and the contents of the questionnaires, what to focus on during the survey to guarantee a representative survey, mock interviews between trainees to gain practice in asking questions, information about the measurements that shall be taken, and of course the ethical considerations (informed consent, etc.). A test phase was also included in which several companies were interviewed to test the questionnaire.

2.2 Step 2: Data collection phase

Deliverables: Analysis report and infographics for 1st survey and focus groups

In this phase, the necessary data has been collected. However, instead of taking a sample, NIKOS proposed to use the complete directory (532 businesses/investors). This for two reasons:

1. Surveying the complete list will result in a more representative 'sample' being taken. As a result of that, generalizations can more easily be made, so that the best possible conclusions and recommendations can be reached. By using the complete list we not only ensure that an adequate level of representation will be achieved, but also that in the data analysis phase, segregated analyses can be made by sector, size, etc. This is not possible if the data set is too small³⁷.
2. We must take non-response into account. Especially with enterprise surveys, the non-response rate is usually quite high. For instance, during the previously mentioned Enterprise survey in Suriname (2018), the number of actual interviews per contacted enterprise was just 0.24. Sustainable Enterprises in Suriname survey (2019), the response rate was just 20%. The business census (2016) had a response rate of 89.3%, but that was not really a survey. Rather, it was a count of businesses with very basic information by the General Bureau of Statistics. Thus, it was reasonable for us to expect a high non-response rate and therefore it is crucial to have a large sample to draw from (or better yet, not a sample but a complete list).

So, during the data collection phase all companies in the directory were contacted numerous times (e-mailed/called/visited) to request their participation in the survey. The data gathering process started on the 27th of August 2024 and lasted until the 4th of October 2024 (however, a few companies still wanted to participate after this period, so they had the chance to do so until the 16th of October 2024, but the fieldworkers stopped contacting companies on the 4th of October 2024³⁸). The response rate for business surveys in Suriname is usually around 20%. This survey has achieved a response rate of around 34% (178 companies out of 523 in the directory). The companies that have participated are quite diverse (see chapter 3), so there seems to be no bias in the participation rate.

For the survey we used Qualtrics Survey Software. The processing and analysis of the data was done with Qualtrics Survey Software, SPSS and Microsoft Excel. For the infographics, a specialized graphic designer (on contract with NIKOS) has been deployed to showcase the main findings of the survey. This will gain the interest of the public, since it is a fact that *“business opinion surveys attract media, forecaster, industry and policymaker interest primarily because they contain a wide range of timely information for decision-makers and indicators for yet-to-be published official statistics”*³⁹.

Once the data collection phase was finalized, both the team leader and research expert (who are both experts in statistics) reviewed the dataset and applied the necessary quality assurance procedures. They also analyzed the non-response to look for biases (patterns). This is of utmost importance if generalizations are to be made from the dataset. After this process was completed, the dataset was finalized and could be further analyzed.

Regarding the focus groups, two meetings will be organized (one with exporters and one with foreign investors) and the focus groups will be conducted using the topic guide in appendix 2.

2.3 Step 3: Post-data collection phase

Deliverables: Analysis report and graphics for 2nd survey and final consolidated report

The second survey will be conducted in the final phase. The shortened version of the same questionnaire will be used (for the purpose of improving the response rate). In this manner, a trend analysis can be conducted. The final report will contain recommendations, though it would be advisable to organize a workshop beforehand (possibly with other relevant stakeholders) to short-list the most ideal recommendations.

³⁸ Data collection took longer than expected, because some of the sources for the directory gave their input late, so some companies were added to the directory during the data collection phase (and that is why they were contacted later than expected).

³⁹ Holmes, M. & Silverstone, B. (2007). Business Confidence and Cyclical Turning Points: A Markov-Switching Approach. New Zealand: University of Waikato Working Paper in Economics 19/07.

2.4 Trend analysis

Triangulation is aimed at deepening and widening one's understanding of a certain topic. It is defined as the use of multiple methods in studying the same phenomenon, for the purpose of increasing the credibility of a study, and it is used for completeness purposes. This can also be done by using different sources of data (data triangulation)⁴⁰. By using two time periods in the same sample/population, we are conducting a longitudinal survey. An advantage of this is that it enables us to examine changes among the businesses/investors over time.

Barometers are data points that represent trends or sentiments in the market or the general economy. In addition to conducting an in-depth analysis with the data of both surveys, we will also look at trends between the two time periods (1st and 2nd survey). Furthermore, we will look at how the data compares to other data of Suriname related to exports/foreign investments. This will help with the validation of the conclusions based on the data.

Figure 14. Longitudinal study for this consultancy with two time periods

2.5 Ethical considerations and quality control

Ethical considerations

The research expert (Jaïr Schalkwijk) has worked for international agencies such as the UN in the past and both he and the team leader (Tamira Sno) have conducted extensive research in Suriname. The research expert has completed courses on the Prevention of sexual exploitation and abuse (PSEA), Prevention of sexual harassment and abuse of authority (PSHAA), Ethics and Integrity and achieving Gender Equality. These important ethical issues will be taken into account during all phases of the research that will be conducted. While conducting the surveys, we will work with Free, Prior and Informed Consent (FPIC). Each study participant (company) will be fully informed about the details of the study. In addition to the aim and survey procedure, the respondent will also be informed on how the information gathered will be used. All respondents will be informed of the voluntary nature of participation and the confidentiality and anonymity of shared information. Additionally, respondents will be informed of their right to refuse answering all or particular questions, as well as to stop the interview at any time.

Quality Control

NIKOS will implement three levels of data quality control for the surveys:

1. Level 1: Direct control over enumerators through: careful selection of enumerators (nationals of Suriname, sufficient level of education, previous experience with surveys, etc.), and in-depth training.
2. Level 2: Direct control by the team leader and research expert with vast experience conducting surveys. They daily checked (real-time through Qualtrics) the data that was collected throughout the data collection phase (this included checking the coherence of data, as well as identifying enumerator's mistakes, unexpected patterns of responses, unusual answers and unexpected correlations). They had regular contact with enumerators during the data collection phase.
3. Level 3: Post data analysis, testing for systematic enumerator mistakes, regular and unexpected patterns of responses, unusual answers, outliers and, more generally, unexpected correlations. The reliability and validity of the variables/data was checked. Additionally, a detailed analysis was undertaken of non-responding parties, to look for any biases (patterns) in non-response.

Analysis

In this chapter we provide a detailed analysis of the barometer survey

3.1 Sector and company information

A total of 178 companies have participated in the survey. All companies in the directory have been contacted numerous times (e-mailed/called/visited) to request their participation in the survey. The data gathering process started on the 27th of August 2024 and officially lasted until the 4th of October 2024 (however, a few companies still wanted to participate after this period, so they had the chance to do so until the 16th of October 2024). This survey has achieved a response rate of around 34% (178 companies out of 523 in the directory). The companies that have participated are quite diverse, so there seems to be no bias in the participation rate. On average, it took companies around 15 minutes to fill in the survey. If we look at the language, 54% used the English version of the questionnaire, while 46% used the Dutch version. So, it was good that the questionnaire was available in both languages.

126 companies in the survey were exporters (or are planning to export in the coming three years) and 59 companies were foreign investors⁴¹. These figures combined exceed the total number of companies that were in the survey slightly, because some foreign investors are also exporting from Suriname (so were in both categories).

Figure 15. Number of exporters and foreign investors that participated in the survey (the combined total exceeds 178 companies, because some companies are in both categories)

⁴¹ The survey software registers from which country the questionnaire was filled in, most often this was from Suriname (127 companies), but also from a lot of other countries such as the Netherlands (8), Brazil (3), France (2), Sint Maarten (2), USA (2), Trinidad & Tobago (2), United Kingdom (1), Columbia (1), French Guiana (1), Italy (1), Guyana (1), Panama (1), while for 26 companies, it could not be determined from which country the survey was filled in. This does not necessarily mean that the company is located in that country, but it does give an indication that the survey reached companies (foreign investors) beyond Suriname.

More than 75% of those who claim to be an exporter are currently active (approximately 50%) or have short term future plans (>25%) to do so, whilst approximately 70% of those who stated to be an investor are not (yet) active.

Figure 16 shows that we have a slightly larger number of companies that provide services than companies that produce goods. In the business census this was also the case, so this seems to be in line with previous findings in Suriname⁴². When looking at the sectors for goods and services it appears that all categories are represented in the survey. Additionally, the distribution among sectors closely resembles the directory, which indicates that no systematic bias is present in the survey (only four sectors are slightly underrepresented or overrepresented⁴³).

Figure 16. Company produces/sells goods or provides services (or both)

The most common product categories among the companies in this survey are Foodstuffs, beverages, spirits, tobacco and tobacco substitutes (25%) and Vegetable and fruit products (13%). The most common service categories are Other business services (e.g. consultancy, support services, advertisement, research) (19%) and Tourism and travel related services (e.g. hotels, restaurants, travel agencies) (17%). It is important to note that the companies themselves were asked to state in which sectors they are active (self-categorization).

⁴² <https://statistics-suriname.org/bedrijventelling-2016/>

⁴³ The incidence of almost all sectors in the survey is within a 5% range from the sectors (products & services categories) in the directory. This shows that the survey findings closely resembles the directory and that all sectors are represented in the survey.

For the products sector, only the category 'Live animals and animal products' is slightly underrepresented in the survey: 17% in the directory compared to 9% in the survey. The category 'Foodstuffs, beverages, spirits, tobacco and tobacco substitutes' is slightly overrepresented in the survey: 19% in the directory compared to 25% in the survey.

Regarding the services sector, the category 'Professional services (e.g. legal, accounting, taxation, engineering, medical)' is slightly underrepresented in the survey: 17% in the directory compared to 11% in the survey. The category 'Tourism and travel related services (e.g. hotels, restaurants, travel agencies)' is also slightly underrepresented in the survey: 25% in the directory compared to 17% in the survey.

We asked all companies if a senior management representative could fill in the questionnaire and this succeeded in many cases, as can be seen from figure 17. In fact, in 44% of cases the CEO/Director filled in the questionnaire and in other cases it was mostly a high-level senior executive.

Just 2% of the companies in this survey were founded before 1950. 13% were founded between 1950 and 1974. 21% were founded between 1975 and 1999. Most of the companies that participated in the survey (63%) were founded in the year 2000 or later (see figure 18).

Most of the companies that responded can be classified as a small business (<50 employees, see figure 19). It appears that 72% fall into this category. Very few companies have more than 250 employees (10%). This indicates that the Surinamese market primarily consists of small businesses (which was also a conclusion of the business census, see 1.2.2). Additionally, the workforce of most companies primarily consisted of Surinamese employees. 86% of all companies stated that their workforce was at least 75% Surinamese.

Regarding the turnover of Surinamese companies, 42% have selected a category below 1 million USD. If we disregard companies that didn't provide an answer, 59% of the companies that answered the question have an annual turnover below 1 million USD. This reinforces the previous finding that the Surinamese market mostly consists of small and medium-sized companies.

When analyzing the turnover of companies, it appears that older companies tend to have a higher turnover. If we compare companies that were founded before 2000 to those that were founded later, it appears that older companies tend to have a higher turnover (larger than 1 million USD). Among foreign investors, 60% of the companies established before 2000 are in this category. For exporters this number is even higher: 78%. In contrast, only a small percentage of older companies have less than 100,000 USD in turnover. 7% of foreign investors are in this category and 6% of exporters (see figure 21 and 22).

When comparing companies by type of product (goods or services), it appears that companies producing goods generally have a higher turnover than companies producing services. In the goods category, 26% generate more than 5 million USD in turnover and only 15% generate less than 100,000 USD. In contrast, in the service category just 11% of companies generate more than 5 million USD, while 43% generate less than 100,000 USD (see figure 23). If we look at company size (by number of employees), larger companies (250+ employees) are more common in the goods category. 15% of companies producing goods have 250 or more employees, while only 3% of companies providing services have this number of employees (see figure 24).

Out of the companies that are active exporters or service providers in other countries, 39% are exporting to the region (Caribbean, Latin American countries), 30% are exporting to the EU, 18% to the USA, and 9% to Asia (see figure 25). If we focus on Guyana, our neighboring country, 25 companies have explicitly mentioned Guyana as an export destination or a recipient of services (these companies are included in the 39% that is categorized as Region).

The majority of exporting companies have positive expectations for the future: 65% of companies expect an increase in their exports/overseas revenue during the following 12 months. Only 16% of companies expect a decrease. Also worth mentioning: 27 companies have explicitly mentioned Guyana as a country to which they are planning to or would like to export or provide services to in the future.

If we attempt to visualize their expectations in a barometer (see figure 27), exporting companies gave an average score of 6.5 (on a scale of 0 to 10) when asked if they expect their exports to increase or decrease in the following 12 months. If we exclude extractive sectors⁴⁴, the score is 6.4 – this is not a big difference compared to the previous score.

⁴⁴ Extractive sectors include: 1. Mineral products (e.g. crude oil and fuel), 2. Stone, glass, 3. Base metals (e.g. iron, aluminium), 4. Pearls, precious & semi-precious stones, precious metals, etc.

In table 5, companies are grouped in different categories: type of product, turnover and company size (by number of employees). For each of these categories, the export expectation score has been calculated. It appears that exporters of services have slightly higher expectations than exporters of goods. If we look at turnover, it appears that companies with a low (<100.000 USD) and high (> 5,000,000 USD) turnover gave a high score, while companies in the middle all gave a score below 6. When looking at company size (by number of employees), the following discovery emerged: the bigger the company, the higher their expectations.

Table 5. Expectations for export growth in the following 12 months (0= significantly decrease, 10= significantly increase) by type of product, turnover and company size.

	Export expectation score
Type of product
Goods	6.2
Services	6.7
Turnover of company
< 100,000 USD	8.1
100,000 – 500,000 USD	5.8
500,001 – 1,000,000 USD	5.8
1,000,001 USD – 5,000,000 USD	5.6
> 5,000,000 USD	7.5
Company size
Small companies (<50 employees)	6.1
Medium-sized companies (50-249)	6.8
Large companies (250+)	8.1

All companies in the survey were asked if they have plans or would like to export/provide services to new countries in the future. 39% have stated that they would like to export to countries in the region (Caribbean, Latin American countries), 19% would like to export to the EU, 12% to the USA, and 4% to Asia.

Most foreign companies that are active in Suriname have a physical branch/office/location in Suriname (93%). Slightly more than 1/3 (36%) of the foreign companies have a local partner in Suriname. Most of the foreign companies have been active in Suriname since the year 2000 or later (93% of the companies). Interestingly 36% of the foreign companies have been active in Suriname only in recent years (2020 or later).

Of the Surinamese companies 23% had an overseas branch and more than half (54%) of the Surinamese companies had some form of internationally recognized certifications such as HACCP or ISO. Just because some companies in Suriname are actively exporting, providing services abroad or catering to tourists, it does not mean that the majority of their revenue is foreign. It appears that most of their revenue is generated in Suriname/by Surinamese locals, despite their status as an exporter, as can be seen from figure 28.

The companies were asked what the top three reasons are, why one should do business (or continue doing business) in Suriname. This was an open-ended question, which makes quantifying the given answers challenging. However, it is noticeable that some factors have been mentioned more often than others, which include the upcoming oil and gas boom, positive future prospects, sufficient land availability, an abundance of natural resources, as well as Suriname’s membership of the Caricom.

Foreign companies specifically tend to mention the cost of labor and relative safety compared to other countries.

Companies owned by Surinamese residents tend to mention (often a combination of) the factors “I live here”, “I was born here”, “the company already exists”, while some also have a desire to assist in the development of Suriname and the local economy, and to provide employment.

Some older, relatively larger Surinamese companies referred to their status as an established, well-known brand with a reputation, which makes it only logical to continue doing business.

3.2 Business climate

More than half of all companies (52%) are more optimistic about the business climate in Suriname compared to 12 months ago. 25% are less optimistic and 24% reported no change. It should be noted that most companies filled in the Barometer survey before TotalEnergies and APA Corporation announced the Final Investment Decision (FID) on the 1st of October 2024 for the development of a production field in Block 58, the first offshore oil field in Suriname. Therefore, we expect companies to be even more optimistic about the business climate now. We expect this to become apparent in the next Barometer survey (which will be conducted in March 2025).

Figure 29. Level of optimism about the business climate in Suriname compared to 12 months ago

We found that large firms are significantly more optimistic about the business climate compared to 12 months ago than smaller and medium-sized firms⁴⁵ (see figure 30). Large firms also have greater expectations for the future. For the following 12 months, large companies gave an average score of 78.4 when asked if the business climate in Suriname is likely to worsen or improve (on a scale of 0 to 100, where 0 = worsen and 100 = improve, see figure 31).

Figure 30. Level of optimism about the business climate in Suriname compared to 12 months ago and company size

⁴⁵ Company size was recoded into small (<50 employees), medium-sized (50-249) and large firms (250+). <https://www.cbs.nl/nl-nl/nieuws/2017/28/meer-bedrijven-met-bedrijfsopleidingen/bedrijfsgrootte>

Figure 31. Expectations regarding the business climate in Suriname during the following 12 months (0= worsen, 100 = improve) and company size

If we look at the average confidence score that companies gave regarding the business climate in Suriname for the following 12 months it was 53.9 (on a scale of 0 to 100, where 0 means worsen and 100 = improve, see figure 32). Foreign investors in Suriname have more confidence in the business climate (61.2) than exporters from Suriname (52.3). Foreign investors are also more optimistic than exporters about the business climate in Suriname compared to 12 months ago (see figure 33)

Figure 33. Level of optimism about the business climate in Suriname compared to 12 months ago for exporters or foreign investors

Table 6 and 7 show the average confidence score of companies in each category of products and services, sorted from low to high. It also shows the biggest obstacle for that category of products and services. Additionally, the export expectation score per category of goods and services has been calculated. Do keep in mind that some categories had very few respondents, making the score less accurate and representative. Categories with few respondents are in italics.

The majority of companies expect an increase in the five areas (orders, workforce, investments, profit and turnover) mentioned in figure 34 during the following 12 months. In this time period, 73% of companies expect an increase in their turnover, 62% expect an increase in profit, 66% expect an increase in investments, 57% expect an increase in their workforce, and 72% expect an increase in their orders.

⁴⁷ If less than 5 companies provided a score it is in italics and should therefore be interpreted with caution.

The 5 issues most commonly reported by companies as a major or very severe obstacle that they face are (see figure 35):

1. Corruption (74% of companies have reported that this is a major or very severe obstacle)
2. Bureaucratic hurdles (inefficiency of government) (69%)
3. Currency fluctuations (65%)
4. Political instability (unpredictability of policymaking) (65%)
5. Lack of transparency (concerning regulations) (57%)

Figure 35. To what degree are the following issues in Suriname perceived or experienced as an obstacle for your company

Foreign investors have mentioned corruption, bureaucratic hurdles and political instability as their 3 most important issues, while exporters name corruption, currency fluctuations and bureaucratic hurdles as their top 3 (see figure 36).

Figure 36. To what degree are the following issues in Suriname perceived or experienced as a major or severe obstacle for your company (exporters and foreign investors) 19 issues/items have been listed as possible obstacles, but a factor analysis shows that these items can be clustered into five main clusters. Factor analysis is a statistical method that aims to uncover structures in large sets of items. The items in the clusters are interrelated, i.e. correlate with each other. The first cluster has more to do with government policy and the government itself, the second cluster is related to real estate and finances, the third cluster concerns infrastructure in terms of utilities and connectivity, the fourth cluster regards items that are somewhat beyond the scope of direct influence, and the last cluster has to do with utilities or prices that influence the direct costs that companies make.

Table 8. Clusters made on basis of a factor analysis

Cluster 1	Cluster 2	Cluster 3	Cluster 4	Cluster 5
Currency fluctuations	Real estate prices	Reliability of utilities (electricity, water)	Labor force (number and cost of applicants)	Prices of utilities (electricity, water) and fuel
Political instability (unpredictability of policymaking)			Labor force (skill/educational level/productivity)
Bureaucratic hurdles (inefficiency of government)	Access to land	IT connectivity	General inflation rate
Lack of transparency (concerning regulations)	Access to finance	Transportation and logistics
Business licensing and (work) permits
Corruption	Lack of (financial) incentives
Crime

At the end of the survey, all companies were asked two open-ended questions. The first was meant to check if we had missed anything in our multiple-choice questions. It also gave companies the chance to elaborate on answers they gave earlier.

The very last question in the survey was simple: “Is there anything else that you would like to share?”

Both questions have led to some interesting answers. It is noticeable that Surinamese-owned companies generally gave longer answers than foreign-owned companies (probably because they know the local context better). The most notable remarks are stated below, combined with basic information about the type of company.

- “Strengthening the economy goes beyond our government’s scope of understanding. They either don’t understand the benefits or they don’t want to understand them. Politicians do not expect that improvements in the economy will benefit them. Fishing in murky waters is what they prefer.” (Surinamese-owned company, financial services)
- “The key is to have partnerships between local entities and foreign companies with specific expertise.” (Surinamese-owned company, Tourism and travel related services)
- “Let’s stop with all these yearly surveys and please just realize a good working environment for producers in Suriname. You know all the answers already of the questions in this survey. Just simple: no killing high taxes for producers, no killing high prices of utilities and labor, no high demands for granting loans or grants, no obstacles for asking for land to plant your herbs to expand your production.” (Surinamese-owned company, Products of chemical or allied industries)
- “The SURGE program is amazing. We need more of those.” (Surinamese-owned company, Distribution services)
- “Suriname has a lot of potential. We just need the right people on the right place, of course disconnected from politics.” (Foreign-owned company, Tourism and travel related services)
- Multiple companies have mentioned that the upcoming 2025 elections are an important development that will have a great impact on the business conditions.
- Multiple companies have mentioned that Suriname needs honest and conscientious leaders who can set the right priorities.
- Multiple companies have mentioned the large number of national holidays as an obstacle.
- Multiple companies have named banking as an obstacle (e.g. opening a bank account, receiving international transfers, applying for credit).

3.3 Conclusions and recommendations

The Barometer Survey highlighted several critical insights into Suriname's economic environment, challenges facing businesses, and the outlook for investment and export sectors.

- Economic dependency on natural resources: Suriname's economy is heavily dependent on non-renewable natural resources, particularly the mining sector, which contributes to over 80% of exports. The Final Investment Decision for the GranMorgu oil project emphasizes this reliance and indicates that economic diversification remains limited.
- Challenges in foreign investment and export expansion: While Suriname has the potential to attract more Foreign Direct Investment (FDI), particularly in sectors outside extractive industries, legal and bureaucratic barriers, high levels of corruption, and political instability deter foreign investors. Additionally, exporters face constraints due to limited economic integration and high dependency on the local market for revenue, further complicating the potential for growth in overseas markets.
- Export expectations: Exporting companies expressed moderate optimism about future growth, with an average score of 6.5 on a 10-point scale, with almost no difference when excluding extractive sectors. Larger companies and those with very low or very high turnovers were more optimistic about exports compared to smaller or mid-turnover companies
- Business climate and confidence levels: The business climate is gradually improving, with 52% of surveyed companies expressing optimism about the current conditions. Companies are in general more confident about the future, giving the expected business climate in the coming 12 months a score of 53.9 (on a scale from 0 – 100). However, optimism is not uniform across sectors or company sizes. Large firms demonstrate higher confidence than small to medium-sized enterprises, and foreign investors are generally more optimistic than local exporters. This variance highlights disparities in the support and incentives available to different types of businesses. We do expect confidence scores to increase, now with the Final Investment Decision for the GranMorgu oil project.
- Institutional barriers: Corruption, bureaucratic inefficiency, and lack of regulatory transparency were identified as major obstacles by a significant portion of respondents. These institutional challenges impact business operations and contribute to an environment where long-term planning is difficult, affecting confidence in the market.

Recommendations

- Diversification of the economic base: Given Suriname's dependency on non-renewable resources, policies that encourage diversification in agriculture, tourism, BPO and ICT should be prioritized. Financial incentives, tax reliefs, and targeted grants can motivate both local and foreign companies to explore these sectors. Establishing partnerships with international partners could also enhance the economic foundation (such as with the current IDB project: Improving Transport Logistics and Competitiveness in Suriname and the current WorldBank project: Suriname Competitiveness and Sector Diversification Project).
- Streamlining bureaucratic processes: To create a business-friendly environment, Suriname should consider reforming bureaucratic processes that hinder business growth. This could involve reducing permit wait times, enhancing transparency, and developing an investment framework with standardized benefits and requirements. The government should ensure fair treatment of investors, while minimizing politicized influence over business decisions.

- Reducing corruption and increasing transparency: Addressing corruption is essential for improving both the business climate and investor confidence. Instituting stricter anti-corruption policies, increasing transparency in public procurement, and implementing regular audits could reduce corruption levels. Introducing a (digital) public registry of business licenses and regulatory permits might also help in tracking approvals and ensuring accountability.
- Improving access to finance for local businesses: Financial access remains a significant barrier, especially for small and medium-sized enterprises. The government could work with financial institutions to provide accessible credit options for these businesses. Partnerships with international development banks to offer low-interest loans or grants for business development could also be explored.
- Long-term infrastructure development: Developing robust physical and digital infrastructure is crucial for enabling businesses to thrive. The government should invest in essential services like reliable electricity, internet connectivity, and improved transportation networks, as these will directly support businesses and attract foreign investors. The introduction of infrastructure improvement programs could also alleviate some of the logistical and operational challenges reported.
- Strengthening regional trade ties: To expand the export market, Suriname could intensify efforts to engage with neighboring countries and regional trade organizations, such as the Caribbean Community (CARICOM). Reducing trade barriers and fostering export opportunities within the region would help Suriname move away from its dependency on non-renewable resources and create a more resilient economy.
- Establishing business climate monitoring and support: Creating a formal mechanism to assess and monitor business climate improvements would enable the government to address issues proactively. Organizing annual business forums to facilitate dialogue between the government and business leaders could help in identifying emerging challenges and making necessary adjustments to policies and support structures.
- Strengthening partnerships with foreign investors: To attract quality investment, Suriname could strengthen its engagement with foreign investors by offering more comprehensive support services and facilitating partnerships with local businesses. Special attention should be given to fostering joint ventures and co-investment opportunities, which would help in transferring knowledge and expertise to local firms. For instance, in Guyana the government tried to create an accommodating environment for the tourism industry. In 2020 the government made a request for proposals to build hotels, and received over 20 proposals. The government came up with an incentive regime for the winnings proposals: a tax holiday for the hotels and working with them to try to find the land to build the hotels. Because of that policy Guyana will have seven new international hotels in 2025 that will employ some 3,000 Guyanese⁴⁸.
- Ongoing barometer surveys for trend analysis: To maintain a clear understanding of business sentiment and trends, the Barometer Survey should continue on at least an annual basis. Consistent data collection will provide essential insights into the evolving needs of the business community and help the government and other stakeholders to tailor their support and policies accordingly.

Vragenlijst Nederlandse versie

Goedendag. Onderzoeksbureau NIKOS voert een opdracht uit namens de Suriname Investment and Trade Agency (SITA), die valt onder het Ministerie van Buitenlandse Zaken, International Business en Internationale Samenwerking. De doelstellingen van SITA zijn om nieuwe buitenlandse investeringen in Suriname te promoten en faciliteren, om bestaande en nieuwe exporteurs te helpen met het vergroten van hun internationale omzet en om lokale leveranciers in contact te brengen met buitenlandse investeerders.

Het doel van dit project is om een 'barometer survey' te houden onder bestaande en toekomstige buitenlandse investeerders en exporteurs. Onder exporteurs vallen ook bedrijven die toeristen als klant hebben en bedrijven die diensten leveren in het buitenland of aan buitenlandse partijen. Met deze survey wordt getracht om het huidige sentiment te peilen en toekomstige kansen en risico's in kaart te brengen, zodat SITA kan pleiten voor de juiste hervormingen om het ondernemingsklimaat in Suriname te verbeteren. SITA is van plan om deze survey op regelmatige basis uit te voeren, zodat er verslag kan worden gedaan aan de overheid over het succes van ingevoerde hervormingen en eventuele nieuwe obstakels die zich voordoen.

Er wordt zorgvuldig omgegaan met alle data, dus uw confidentialiteit is gewaarborgd. Verzamelde data wordt uitsluitend in geaggregeerd formaat weergegeven.
